

We were on a dive vacation in the bermuda triangle,

What could happen'?

We went to the Bahamas for a dive vacation. The Bahamas are in the southern part of the infamous Bermuda triangle. You know the stories, missing ships and planes, missing with out explanation. Yah that place.

While on one of the wall dives, off in the distance, we see something large, vary large and unusual shape but somehow familiar. As we swam closer it seemed to get even bigger. What the hell is that?

At a depth of 1000 meters, the volcanic landscape is covered in a dense carpet of the bottom in about 1000 meters depth.

Two divers are seen swimming over a large, flat, greenish structure on the seabed, possibly a piece of debris or a large net. The structure is covered in a dense layer of small, light-colored particles, possibly sediment or coral fragments.
